What, I wonder, brought about the demise of so many Village Shows. I don't mean the pleasant and gentle Fetes of so many summer afternoons. I refer to the splendidly serious business of the real autumnal Show where king vegetable reigns. I was at one on Saturday over at Elsworth, that lovely, meandering village to the west of Cambridge where the folk combine hospitality with natural charm. Here, in the schoolroom, are assembled the fruits of a community's labours over the year. Jams, home-made wine, honey, fruit, flowers, splendid vegetables, sacks of wheat and barley, needlework, woodwork, handicrafts and lots and lots of entries from talented youngsters. I have always thought that there is little point in growing and making beautiful things if you can't show them off and if you can't earn yourself that deep personal pleasure which comes from giving fruit, flowers and veg to the neighbours. The Show is the place to Show Off. So -- bring back The Show. Start organising next year's. Now.

A lovely afternoon at Elsworth. England at its very best. Autumnal heat, golden stubbled fields, ice cream under a shady tree. Grandpa holding his silver cup. For what, I wonder? His gladioli perhaps. His granddaughter clutching a prize for her jam tartlets. A band playing old favourites, grunts from the tug-of-war teams, squeaks of excitement from the bran tub, hot tea and fresh cakes. And people queue in sweaty airports to fly away from such delights.
